of light task, and may require years of fighting, but this will be no novelty for England. It took her mere than three-quarters of a century of fighting to complete the conquest of India, and while the known riches of the Soudan do not compare with those of India, the region is worth the struggle.

Dong la is now in possession of the Englise, and with those of India, and the Englise, and the struggle.

Khalifa. In a measure, he is not unlike the sudan of Turkey. He has urged the massacre of tens of thousands of his subjects simply because he regarded them as obstacles to his continuance as the Mahdi's successor. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, after three years of power, and Abdallak, as the chief Khalifa, was appointed to succeed time. Abdallak as the chief Khalifa, was appointed to succeed time. Abdallak was the Mahdi's choice for the throne, and he was nominated for the place just before the Mahdi died. The "Capter Storm" in the north and Abyasinia on the south, the eastern boundary being the Red sea, the western the Eine Nile.

Osman was born in Tokar, a town about 100 miles south of Suakin. He is tall gaunt, rather inclined to stoop, and lacking the erect, graceful bearing of the Arabs. His skin is chocolate color, his forehead is full and high, and his nose prominent. His hair is shaggy and crimpy and his heard long and now quite gray. He has firm lips, not too thick, and its eyes are dark and melancholy in expression. throne, and he was nominated for the place just before the Mainti died. The word of the Mainti was law, but the choice was not an agreeable one and chief and other merchandise of an ordinary nort. He managed to put money which would have disrupted the strongest nation on the face of the globe.

THE BAGGARA TRIBE.

The opposition was due to the fact at Abdullah was the chief of the Bughad abbuilah was the chief of the Bug-gares, the most tyranical, murderous and marful tribe in the Soudan. The elevation of Abbuilah meant supreme power for his followers, the Baggaras. The two other leading tribes, the Dan-agias and Joalins, knew that the Bag-garas would show them small mercy, and the past eleven years has proven the truth of this prediction.

The Danagia is the native tribe of the Dongola region and the Joalin tribe be-longs to the neighboring country, while the Bagguras are interlopers. Prior to the accession of Abdullah the Danthe accession of Abduliah the Dan-agias and Josdins were the rulers. Now they are the ruled, the Baggarus hav-ing the whip hand. During his reign of eleven years, three-lifths of the pop-ulation of the Soudan have perished by war and famine, much of the misfor-tune being due to Abduliah. In times of famine he has given permission to the Bargaras to plunder the other arthers and the Bargaras were fat and the Bargaras to pulmer the other arribes, and the Baggaras were fat and strong, wanting nothing, while the others died by thousands and the living ground up the bones of the dead to make a kind of flour for bread.

Donn't la is now in possession of the English, and " invading forces have the Mabdiests on the run. This marks the first chapter of the fall of the Khalifa and Osman Digna, two of the most unique and terrible characters the vorid over. A century or two hence, when people read of the careers of these men, they will probably regard the close of the inter-english probably regard the close of the inter-english probably regard the figure rescals to survive.

Of the two, the bigger rascal is the Khalifa. In a measure, he is not unique and the country lying between the Nubian desert on the north and Abysenian on the south, when the session of Turksy He has a ways.

He began life as a dealer in fruits, feathers and other merchandise of an ordinary sort. He managed to put money by, and little by little made ventures, multiple had arrived at the dignity of an influential Arab trader. Thereafter his fortunes rapidly increased, thanks to his enterprises in kidnapping slaves in the reston around Albert Nyanza. In the rising of the Mahdi he saw his opportunity, in 1883, while buying merchandise in the Soudan, he visited the prophet, professed conversion to his cause and received a commission to rouse the faithful in the eastern Soudan to join in the holy war.

in the eastern Soudan to join in the holy war.

Returning to his own country, he soon attracted thousands to the standard of the Mahdi. His eloquent appeals and his piety roused his followers to familical frenzy which made them utterly reckless of life and a terribly formidable foe to the English and Egyptian troops that dd hattle with them. Nothing daunted them, Nothing ever drove them from the tield. Death alone vanquished them. Before a fight Osman used to appear before his troops arrayed in a shelkh's loser robe, on which were braided, in yellow and green, words from the Koran, and as they rushed upon the enemy he prayed aloud shed upon the enemy he prayed aloud Allah to send the souls of the infidels

They held their pens differently, and assumed a position at their desks other than that which they had been taught. A study of the best specimens of these business hands showed that the writers had gone back to the simple, round, Roman-like characters, which many teachers claimed as natural to young children. These business men sat immediately in front of their desks, their hands taking the most natural position. On these facts the system of vertical writing was based.

The curious part of all this is that six months before Jane had saved McCaul's life. She and six others were passengers on McCaul's coach, running from Dendwood to Wild Birch. A lunch-box is generally much preferred by children to the old-time basket unless the latter te of box shape, so that it may be made into a neat flat package. A cardboard box does excellently, as it can be often renewed and should be deep enough to hold a jelly tumbler with a cover and of sufficient size to counting a generous supply jelly tumbler with a cover and of sufficient size to contain a generous supply of sandwiches and some nice tidhits in the way of a "finish of," as to this latter dainty, so dear to a school doy's or girl's heart, there is nothing that so fits into the important place as an old-fashloned "turnover" and if made of flakey, not over-rich, pastry, is wholesome as well as toothsome. If the family indulges in pastry, once or twice a week, it is very little trouble to remember the school funcheon box, when the baking is going on, and patty pans for small cakes, should be at hand at all times of cake baking.

When the apples were baked for function the day before, a puffy, snowy white one was popped into a felly glass, a little sugar sprinkled over it and put away for her. Home-made cookies were her elder sisters' specialty and there were four of these, they and the sand-wiches wrapped in white paper and a fringed napkin spread lightly over all, simply this and nothing more, and yet it was luncheon fit for a princers or rather for an American school girl. is was luncheon fit for a princers or rather for an American school gri. Ruth goes listlessly after her backet, deciaring that she does not want any lunch; however, she opens it and out tumbles a small white bundle, which, typon being opened, is found to contain wads of bread with dabs of butter, some clinging to the bread, but most of it "going it alone," and looking like thin bits of cheese; the chicken in Macge's sandwich had been nicely chopped or ground, but here instead are thick slices of hard looking ham. A raw apple and a slice of dry cake completes the menu. The cost of each luncheon is the same, but one is scarcely touched and nearly all goes to warte, while the other has not so much as a crumb left to tell the toothsome tale.

There should always be two jelly glasses for the school lunchton, and if one is put on the table at the mid-day meal of the family, there will always be a little fruit to be slipped into it.
